

CLEAN WATER:

The cornerstone of HOPE projects

More than 1 billion people use unsafe sources of drinking water daily, and preventable water-borne diseases claim the lives of more than 5 million people annually.

Where there is no water, HOPE helps people find water. Where there is contaminated water, HOPE helps the people find ways to protect the water source and ensure the availability of clean water for years to come. With access to clean water, communities can prosper: the overall health of population improves, farmers can better cultivate their land, children are more likely to attend school, and women spend more time on activities other than retrieving water. Access to clean water and effective sanitation facilities mark the starting line for this climb out of debilitating poverty into a future filled with hope.

In the developing world, HOPE assists the neglected poor by supporting viable and sustainable projects.

In Japan, HOPE informs and educates residents in matters pertaining to sustainable development work in the developing world.

All activities of HOPE International Development Agency are made possible by the generous support of individuals, companies and groups involved in our programs, to whom we would like to say again... THANK YOU!
